PROSECUTION IN EICHMANN TRIAL BROUGHT OUT ON MASSIVE SCALE THE CRUELTY, CRAFTINESS, IDIOCY THAT EVOLVED IN GERMANY FROM HITLER'S CONCEPT DENYING A COMMON BASE FOR ALL HUMANITY; THE FANTASTIC NAZI SET-UP FOR DESTRUCTION OF THE JEWS

It goes without saying that the state's case has been proved and Eichmann will not be acquitted in the Jerusalem Court of the murder of six million Jews, writes Robert S. Bird, of the New York Herald Tribune. It has been clear from the beginning that this trial was above all for history and for the conscience of humanity. It also has been for the education of the young Israeli generation and the younger generations all over the world. But in Israel at least the attention of the young people has been arrested. They have done some thinking about it and this must be all to the good.

Considering the prosecution's case by itself, there have been plenty of ragged moments in the presentation of the evidence, a little extra propaganda here and there, perhaps a not too subtle infiltration of Israeli political influences in certain places in the development of the case.

But this is nothing to quarrel about, for the grand sweep of the indictment and of Attorney General Gideon Hausner's opening address has been by and large abundantly supported by the evidence he has brought forward.

Eichmann is charged with crimes against the Jewish people, with crimes against humanity, with certain specific war crimes and with membership in a hostile organization.

All these charges have been substantiated, both by voluminous documentation — thanks to the German penchant for keeping bureaucratic records on everything — and by detailed eye-witness testimony.

In the development of the prosecution's case, the framework and the pattern of the evidence tended to get lost in the daily reporting because of the drama of horror and tragedy which colored it throughout and which hourly in the session thrust itself forward relentlessly.

But the fact is the prosecution brought out on a massive scale all the proliferation of cruelty, craftiness, and idiocy that evolved in Germany from Hitler's concept denying a common basis for all humanity, says the New York Herald Tribune. Everything in the Israeli prosecution of Eichmann goes back to this idea which Hitler outlined in detail in "Mein Kampf." It was this idea which made possible the Nazi view of the Jews as a race of submen who were perforce the corruptors and enemies of the master race, which had alone contributed the treasure of culture to the world.

Early in the prosecution's case, the observers at this trial were initiated into the inversion of the Nazi racist notions, where they themselves became the submen of humanity as their street-fighter gangs roamed pre-war Berlin singing their famous song, "When Jewish blood spurts from the knife, then all goes doubly well."

The prosecution traced in testimony and documents the emergence in Hitler's Germany of the idea of annihilating the Jewish race, and of plundering it of all it had.

It was shown in the trial that the Nazi street gangs terrorized not only the Jews but the German people at first. Then the Jews became what they had been all through history, the scapegoat for the immediate frustrations of the people amid whom they lived.

As these major trends were developed in the trial, obscured though they were in the avalanche of particular incidents told in the testimony, there also was unfolded into the court record the fantastic Nazi organization for implementing the grandiose notions of Hitler — that is, the destruction of the Jewish people and the establishment on a foundation of naked cynicism and power of the vaunted thousand-year Reich.

In this Eichmann case the organization was the criminal and sadistic SS (Nazi Elite Guard) headed by Heinrich Himmler that concerned the tribunal.

The table of organization was laid out to show how the SS became a state within a state in Nazi Germany, an almost unimaginably pervasive organization, with the notorious R.S.H.A., or Reich Security Main Office, serving as one of the twelve major branches under Himmler along with its Bureau IV consisting of the Gestapo, into which Eichmann's office was incorporated.

Eichmann's Section IVB4 became under him the "Jewish" department, says the New York Herald Tribune. The Attorney General produced a veritable mountain of evidence to show how Eichmann arbitrarily ruled virtually supreme over all matters affecting the Jews everywhere in Europe.

The documentation was overwhelming in showing that this lieutenant colonel of the SS was able to go over the heads of his superiors and appeal directly to Himmler in Jewish matters, and that he did this constantly.

Also overwhelming is the documentation now in evidence on the nature and quality of his ardor in persecuting the Jews and seeing to it that every last one of them, as it seemed, would be exterminated.

From the hundreds of tons of captured German documents, enough has been produced in the trial to indicate that Eichmann regarded himself as having a mission to see that the Jews were exterminated and that the others of the Nazi organization respected this mission of his.

Not until the end, when Germany was collapsing, did Eichmann and his associates start knifing each other.

In the extermination of the millions of Jews of Europe, the prosecution showed that Eichmann was everywhere planning, issuing orders, making inspection trips, cracking down on persons and governments who were helping the Jews escape, and always watching jealously for any deviation from his aims to rid Europe of its Jewry.

The cynicism of the evacuation and extermination operations against the Jews has been reported in considerable detail, but perhaps some of this too needs to be reviewed in terms of the major trends.

It has been shown in the trial that the technical method of extermination gave the Nazis some trouble in the beginning. At the start it was thought for a while that wholesale shootings by the special execution battalions, together with incitement to pogroms against the Jews by local populations, might be enough.

But it quickly became apparent that execution by bullets could not cope with the problem of total annihilation, and so the idea of gassing the Jews in mobile vans was tried, says the New York Herald Tribune. Finally, the grand design which came to fruition in Hungary was developed, and the documents in evidence show that Eichmann was one of the major planners and implementing personalities in that.

The method was, first, to concentrate the Jews, usually in slum areas of the city which would be designated as ghettoes and then blocked off and guarded by the police. After that, the evacuations began to the factory-type extermination camps. But this was a somewhat complicated process because, as it was systemized, the Jews first had to be robbed of everything.

For reasons which were not explained in the trial, there was imposed on the Jews a humiliation at the outset, then forms of degradation which became progressively worse as the Jewish populations neared the gas chambers.

What has been amply documented and described by the eye-witnesses and the victims themselves in this baffling practice of the Nazis in carrying their cruelty to extremes which approached idiocy at the end.

To explain this was not any part of this trial aim, which after all is concerned with the juridical aspects of the crimes and not the psychiatry.

But this remains the great enigma of the holocaust — the obsessive inhuman cruelty of the German murderers.

A ninety-six page glossary of Nazi terminology ranging from "Aberkennung" (deprivation of civil rights) to "Zwangssterilisierung" (compulsory sterilization), was distributed by the Eichmann Trial Administration of the Israeli police, says Alvin Rosenfeld, in the New York Herald Tribune. A foreword drily said that the special vocabulary created by the Nazis to describe their actions and system "has a most specific sound and nature but cannot be described as educated German."

"It is designed to convey emotion by a choice of archaic, pompous and colorful terminology and was meant to create a feeling of strength in its listeners and users," the foreword said. The glossary was prepared for use by journalists and simultaneous translators at the Eichmann trial.

The foreword cautioned the glossary's users that "the majority of the Nazi leaders came from low social strata; they were, in fact, riff-raff, and Winston Churchill's description of Hitler as a 'bloodthirsty guttersnipe' got close to the truth."

The Nazi leaders, the glossary added, "made up for their lack of education by latching on to impressive sounding words, which were frequently linguistic monstrosities."

The foreword did not add one known fact about Nazi terminology — it was frequently designed to camouflage such actions as mass murder behind innocent sounding phrases. This point was apparently not made because it touches upon a matter which is "sub judice" before the court.

However, the glossary, in its English and French translations, contained literally dozens of words which concerned Nazi actions against Jews and other minorities and conquered peoples, says the New York Herald Tribune. In English translation they included: Deportation, liquidation of property, solution of the the Jewish problem, and to de-Jew or clear an area of Jews. Other similar expressions in the glossary were: To pacify by fear, mongrel, unworthy life form and racial infamy, meaning sexual relations with a non-Aryan.

How was the plundered booty taken from European Jews channeled into German hands? A confidential Nazi document, read by the prosecution at the Eichmann trial, gave this partial breakdown:

"The Ministry of Economy received 97,000 men's suits, 70,000 ladies' outfits, 270,000 kilograms (nearly 300 tons) of bed feathers.

"The Volksdeutsche received 15,000 children's coats, 3,000 children's trousers, 99,000 men's overcoats, 155,000 ladies' coats, 125,000 ladies' shirts, 111,000 ladies' shoes. The German Youth received 20,000 ladies' pullovers."

Another document said 54,000 men's wrist watches were divided among German fighting units.

On trial for his life on charges of having murdered millions of Jews, Eichmann, a former Lieutenant Colonel in the Gestapo (secret police), said anti-Jewish measures "initiated" by Dr. Hans Globke had wrecked the last chance for orderly emigration of European Jews. Dr. Globke is State Secretary to Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany.

Under examination by Dr. Robert Servatius, his German defense lawyer, Eichmann again brought up the name of Dr. Adenauer's right-hand man. Eichmann, said to be embittered because West Germany had done nothing to aid his defense, charged that Dr. Globke had been the initiator of a decree that had confiscated Jews' property and revoked their citizenship, says the New York Herald Tribune. Dr. Globke was the legal adviser to the Nazi Department of the Interior in World War II.

Dr. Servatius produced a Foreign Ministry document showing that Eichmann spoke up at a meeting in 1940 against proposed legislation to deprive Jews of German citizenship. The minutes of the meeting said Eichmann had expressed fear that masses of stateless Jews would be barred by countries that were still willing to receive Jewish immigrants with nationality papers.

Asked by Dr. Servatius, to explain his attitude at the time, Eichmann said:

"I was head of the [Gestapo] bureau dealing with emigration. We had to regard the proposal for depriving Jews of German citizenship as a serious obstacle, because these people could very well emigrate without papers.

"My chief (Lieut. Gen. Heinrich Mueller, head of the Gestapo) instructed me to attend the meeting and voice objections. We were not listened to. Of course, we had to acquiesce."

Eichmann said that the resulting law — "the eleventh decree" supplementing the Nuremberg racial laws became the legal justification for the deportation of Jews to concentration camps in Poland. Under this regulation, Jews automatically lost their citizenship the minute they crossed the Reich's frontier and all their property was confiscated.

He said that in 1941 the Interior Ministry called another meeting to discuss the "dictatorial" eleventh decree. "I do not know whether it was Hering (a legal adviser in the Interior Department) or Globke who issued the invitations," he said.

To enhance his image as a protector of Jews instead of an "arch-exterminator" of them, Eichmann flatly denied that his office had had anything to do with "extermination of Jews by forced labor."

The first count of the fifteen-count indictment against him contains the charge that he "caused the killing of hundreds of thousands of Jews in forced-labor camps" where inmates were "enslaved, tortured and starved to death."

He said he had arranged an eight-day ration for Jewish deportees to the East when a two-day ration had proved insufficient because of transportation delays, says the New York Herald Tribune. He said he did this on orders after German officials in Poland threatened to send back any further trainloads of half-starved Jews.

Excluding any humane motivation for his act, Eichmann said that if he had not supplied the eight-day ration "the deportees would have been back and there would have been bottlenecks." The Battle of Stalingrad came up when Eichmann denied he had been responsible for speeding deportations

FAMILIES

The rapid growth of Belcourt's Westpark community is one of the outstanding achievements in building circles in recent years. We attribute this, first, to the extremely good values being offered in well-designed, well-built homes and, second, to the intrinsic merits and conveniences of this green-belt residential areas.

These advantages are, naturally, of interest to many Jewish prospective home-owners. In reply to a number of enquiries, we are happy to state that a Jewish community already exists in nucleus. Several families are now in residence, with more to follow in the near future. Suitable land is available for a synagogue, and full cooperation will be accorded the representatives of a new congregation. In other words, Westpark is past the "pioneer" stage.

We invite you to drive out to Belcourt's Westpark. Look around at the homes and the neighbourhood. If you like what you see, we can arrange for you to meet with other like-minded families. Please telephone Irving Zuncnshine or Ron Weiner at 735-1648 for further information.

DIRECTIONS:

WESTPARK is adjacent to Rexboro, off Sources Road, (St. Remi Road), 2 mile south of Gouin Boulevard, 2 miles north of the old Metropolitan Boulevard. Watch for Belcourt signs at intersections.

THE FIRST SMILE

BY MIRIAM YALAN-STEKELIS, FORMER DIRECTOR OF THE SLAVONIC SECTION OF THE NATIONAL HEBREW UNIVERSITY LIBRARY; FIRST HEBREW WRITER TO BE AWARDED THE ISRAEL PRIZE FOR LITERATURE FOR STORIES AND POEMS FOR AND ABOUT CHILDREN

THIS STORY IS FROM THE ISRAEL ARGOSY

Mummy says, when you can't sleep, you must count . . ., count sheep going through a gate. Just close your eyes and count. So I close my eyes, and I count. But I don't go to sleep. I don't see the gate, and I don't want to count the sheep, and I don't get to sleep.

It's all because of the wind, and because of the darkness. The shutters hide the darkness, but I know Darkness is there, just outside. I don't like the dark, it keeps me up.

And the wind's there too. Howling, and bullying the trees, and bending the branches so they sigh. The wind cries. Maybe because they shut him out, and he doesn't want to be out at night, and he's afraid of Darkness.

I'm not afraid. I'm big. Mummy says big girls are not afraid of the dark. I'm not afraid. Why, what can he do to me? He's outside, and I'm in. I'm not afraid.

Darkness is so big and so cold and so sad. Why is it so sad at night? I want light, and the morning to come, and the sun. Then the door will open and mummy will come in, and mummy will say: Good morning, darling, wake up!

But I'll lie there, and shut my eyes, and just keep quiet, as if I were asleep. And she'll go over and open the window and the shutters, and the great light will jump into the room, and tickle my eyes, and I'll want to laugh, and to open my eyes, but I won't. And mummy will bend over me and say: Get up, my lazy one! Look, it's so nice and beautiful this morning!

But I'll close my eyes and keep quiet and wait. Then mummy will sit on my bed and kiss me, and I'll jump up and hug her, and shout: Mummy, good morning, mummy!

I want mummy to come to me now, at once. The door ought to open, and she should come in, now please, at once. I don't wait to wait. Mummy, why don't you come?

Come to me, to me and not to Raphy. Not to Raphy. It's all because of Raphy. Mummy loves Raphy, and she doesn't love me. Perhaps I'll wake Raphy up? He'll cry, and mummy will hear and she'll come? But then, they wouldn't say I'd been a good girl. And she wouldn't come to me, she'd go to him. No, I'd better not.

The wind cries. Perhaps he cries for his mummy, too?

When Raphy was in mummy's tummy, I said to her: "Why do we need another child? Look, you've got a child, why do you want another one?

And she said: "It'll be nice! We'll have a baby in the house. You'll see, darling, you'll see how lovely our baby will be.

And I said: But why, why do you need another baby? You already have a daughter!

And she answered: You'll have a sweet little brother, or a sister. And you'll see how nice it will be and what fun!

But it isn't true. She doesn't let me help her, she doesn't let me even touch him. And when he fell down, she was terribly angry. And he doesn't love me, not at all. And she doesn't love me either. No one loves me. She loves Raphy, not me. She gives him her own milk, from her breast. Because she loves him. And me she gives milk from a cup. And when the cup fell and broke, and the milk spilt all over my new dress, she was very cross, and she said: What has happened to you, Yael? When you were small, you always behaved so well, and now you have started breaking cups! She doesn't love me, no, she doesn't love me.

She loves Raphy, and she loves Israel. Israel stands and looks at Raphy and says: Son, how are you, my son? No one says to me: My son!

I want to be a boy. Why do I always have to be a girl? Sometimes I want to be like Raphy, and my daddy would stand there and say: Son, how are you, my son?

But my daddy isn't there any more. My daddy is only in the picture on the wall. High up on the wall. I get on a chair, and stand very near and high, and look at the face of my daddy. And mummy says: "Remember, meidele, remember. This is our daddy."

And I ask: Why do you always say "meidele"?

And mummy says: He used to call you that, that's what daddy called you: meidele mine. And she cries. I don't cry. I look at my daddy's face. Why is my daddy only in the picture? Why do all the other children have daddies, and I have no daddy? They always tell me: Your father fell in battle, your father is a hero. I don't want a hero for my daddy, I want my daddy. Not in the picture on the wall. Just my daddy. That's all.

And if he fell in battle, why didn't they pick him up? Why didn't they bring him home, to me, to mummy? Mummy would have taken care of him, and I would have looked after him, and daddy wouldn't have died. But they didn't pick him up, and they didn't bring him home, and he died there in the hospital. I know, I remember. Mummy thinks I don't remember because I was so small then. But I do remember, I remember everything.

I woke up, suddenly; the light was on and mummy was not in her bed. Mummy was sitting at the table, and two men were standing there. Standing and looking at mummy. And mummy was sitting, with her eyes shut and her face very white. She didn't say a word, and they didn't say a word. And one had a big gun, and he himself was small. And the other had such a small gun, and he was tall. And I'm not afraid, because they are our boys. And I get out of bed and go to the table. And the tall one lifts me up in his arms, and holds me very tight. And something cold and hard hurts my arm, but I keep quiet. And he says: Fanya, the child's woken up. And mummy opens her eyes, and looks at me, but her eyes don't see me. Her eyes are open but they don't see me, and I'm very frightened. And the tall boy says: Fanya. And again: Fanya! And the small one doesn't say anything. And mummy doesn't speak. And her eyes don't see.

Suddenly she gets up, and says: Let's go. And she takes me, quickly, and dresses me very quickly, and the tall one says: It's very cold, Fanya. There's a strong wind, we have a long way to go.

And he takes her coat and puts it on mummy's shoulders, and he takes me and wraps me up in the big blanket, and takes another blanket. And takes his gun. And the short one puts out the light, and we go out and he shuts the door.

And mummy says: Drive fast, Israel, drive fast.

And he says: I am driving fast.

And she squeezes my hand very hard, so it hurts, and she says: Hurry, Hurry, we might be in time. And he doesn't say anything.

The wind howls just like now. The road is bad, the road is long. The car jumps, and mummy says: We might be in time. . . All along she keeps saying: Hurry . . . We might . . . Hurry, hurry. . .

And of course there is shooting all the time. Small shooting and big shooting. The small says: Tak-tak-tak-tak-tak-tak-tak! And the big says: Boom . . . Boom . . .

Then . . . suddenly I'm awake. There are many lights, and mummy says: Take the child. And somebody puts me on the floor, and I'm all alone. I'm standing in a corridor, and the corridor is very long and very white, and at the end there is an open door. And I walk to that door, and go in, and stand at door. And the room is full of light, and everything is white, and there are lots of beds, and mummy is sitting by a bed, and in

In such cases the pace-maker is used to restart the heart beat and heart action can be maintained for long periods. While complex in its mechanism, it is simple to operate, is portable, and can be transferred to any part of the hospital rapidly. It takes only a few minutes to attach and operate. The Expansion Of Arab League Activities Against Israel

BY LOUIS SEGAL, OF NEW YORK, GENERAL SECRETARY OF THE FARBAND LABOR ZIONIST ORDER; MEMBER OF THE WORLD ZIONIST ORGANIZATION EXECUTIVE

President Kennedy's recent letters to Nasser and the other Arab rulers, prior to Prime Minister Ben-Gurion's visit to the United States, again dramatized the problems of the Middle East. The President's letters carry special significance in view of the fact that the problems of the Arab refugees and other matters concerning Israel were placed on the Agenda of the U.N. session.

The U.N. has been expending many millions of dollars each year for the maintenance of the Arab refugees; of which about 70% is contributed by the United States and the balance by other member nations in the U.N. with the exception of Soviet Russia. Despite this huge expenditure during the past twelve years, nothing of a constructive nature has been accomplished as Colonel Nasser and his cohorts continue to use the Arab refugee problem as a political weapon against Israel.

Israel and her friends are fully cognizant of the fact that the Arabs fled upon the advice of the Mufti who promised they would return immediately following the annihilation by the Arab armies of the newly established State of Israel. Israel has, on numerous occasions, suggested a most logical plan with regard to help in solving the refugee problem. It is being proposed that the refugees be resettled in the various Arab countries which have tremendous areas of unused land and require much manpower and development. Israel, in such a plan, would participate in contributing generously toward a fund to be established by the U.N. for the resettling and rehabilitation of the Arab refugees.

The enemies of Israel contend that an opportunity should be given to the Arab refugees for freedom of choice as to returning to Israel or being resettled in the various Arab countries. Such procedure, if accepted by the U.N., will undoubtedly be most harmful to Israel because the refugees would then create a permanent fifth column in the country. For more than twelve years Israel has rescued over a half million Jews from Arab countries, whose lives were in danger and who left all their possessions behind to flee to Israel. The Arabs continuously refuse to admit this reality; but Israel, on the other hand, is still willing to make restitution to the Arab refugees for all properties and belongings left in Israel when they fled upon the advice of the Mufti.

At present, over a quarter of a million Arabs live in Israel. The Arab population is comprised of those who never fled, those who returned to rejoin their families, and also those born in Israel since 1948.

The portions of President Kennedy's letters which thus far have been revealed, indicate that Israel will be expected to participate financially and also agree to allow a number of refugees to return to Israel as part of a solution to the problem.

Some American Senators and Congressmen have raised serious objections to having the United States expend more millions of dollars to aid the Arab refugees when such aid is being used by Nasser as an additional political weapon against Israel, raising a possibility that Congress would refuse to continue to participate in the U.N. Budget for the Arab refugees, unless a constructive plan for a permanent solution of the problem is evolved.

The first reaction of the Arab rulers to President Kennedy's letters seems to be that the problems of the Middle East and the Arab refugees could not be solved as long as Israel remains a sovereign state. From this it is obvious that Nasser and the Arab League have only one desire and that is the destruction of Israel. Therefore, it is impossible to speak of peace and any solution with the Arab leaders until they are clearly made to understand that Israel will remain forever an independent state in the family of nations.

Unfortunately, the cold war between the Eastern and Western powers is a deterrent in removing the tension which exists in the Middle East. Both would like to win the Arabs as an ally and thus far the Russians have been, regrettably, more successful.

It is incumbent upon the United States Government to take a clear and realistic position as to these problems and to help bring about direct negotiations between Israel and the Arab countries with a view to reaching a satisfactory solution. The Arabs must be made to understand that it is in their best interests that a majority of the refugees be resettled in the Arab countries, affording them an opportunity to be united with their own people; settling on the vast undeveloped areas in those countries and cultivating the land and creating new industries for the benefit of all concerned.

This can best be accomplished by an international loan in which Israel will surely go a long way to participate. Israel will also be guided by her previous action and permit the return of a number of Arabs for the purpose of reuniting broken families. President Kennedy's suggestion that a number of the refugees be resettled in the United States and other countries of the Western Hemisphere may also prove to be most constructive for the plan.

It is surely self-evident that the continued handling of this problem as heretofore, and America's spending of considerable amounts for the Arab refugees, will only serve to nurture a dangerous situation in the Middle East which is affecting the entire free world. The American people and the Government should be on the alert to this problem which must be solved on a permanent basis in a spirit of justice and fairness for all parties concerned.

EICHMANN TRIAL

of Jews. He acknowledged that deportations had been speeded at times, but he asserted that they had been ordered by leading Nazis as diversions to take the public's mind off military disasters.

When he was shown a letter signed by Mueller in January 1942, requesting urgent data on Jews who could be evacuated from Minsk, Eichmann said:

"The date proves the point clearly. After Stalingrad, efforts were made by the Reich propaganda authorities to speed deportations to divert public attention from the disaster. It was necessary for the authorities to find a red herring, a scapegoat."

Another speed-up had followed the assassination of Reinhardt Heydrich, chief of the security police in May, 1942, Eichmann said.

Dr. Servatius also asked Eichmann to explain an order by Mueller in March, 1941, halting deportations temporarily. Did this order not aim at correcting Eichmann's "excessive zeal" for deportations? Dr. Servatius asked.

"The date gives the answer," Eichmann replied, says the New York Herald Tribune. "At that time considerable military forces were being moved to the East and rolling stock was necessary for that operation. Hence, Jewish evacuation had to be stopped."

The head of the three-man tribunal which heard the Adolf Eichmann case in Jerusalem fled Germany and his dual role was played out in Palestine. Like many Jews during World War II, Moshe Landau lived a double life. By day Mr. Landau sat under a portrait of King George VI in the Magistrates Court on the slopes of Mount Carmel and administered British justice, says the New York Times. At night, he acted as a Jewish patriot and moved to a secret court in the lower part of the harbor city and adjudicated cases for the illegal Jewish underground movement, the Haganah.

Mr. Landau left Germany in 1930 to go to Britain to study law. Hitler had risen to power by the time Mr. Landau obtained his Bachelor of Law degree in 1933 and the new lawyer did not return to Danzig, the place of his birth. Instead, he went to Palestine.

Mr. Landau, who is 48 years old, is the youngest member of the Israeli Supreme Court. However, he is one of the best known justices. That is attributable to the fact that some of the cases he has handled have won wide attention.

One judgment he handed down two years ago was in the case of Israeli officers and men of the Border Police who killed forty-three Arab villagers while enforcing a curfew on the Israeli-Jordanian frontier. The massacre occurred October 29, 1956, while the Israeli Army was attacking the Egyptians in the Sinai Peninsula. The Arabs had returned to their village unaware that the curfew had been imposed.

The accused pleaded that the orders to shoot curfew breakers had come from higher echelons and that they had not acted according to their own wishes. Justice Landau presided over the appeal in the Supreme Court. He upheld the conviction of eight officers and men. He said: "A soldier, too, must have a conscience."

Justice Landau explained, says the New York Times, that the obviously merciless order should have aroused the conscience of every man, down to the last private, "even under the special circumstances that existed on that day."

Eichmann's counsel, Dr. Robert Servatius of Cologne, Germany, based the defense on the assertion that Eichmann merely had been a cog in a machine, that he had only obeyed superior orders in sending millions of Jews to annihilation camps.

Justice Landau is a tall, soft-spoken, distinguished looking man who prefers dressing in conservative English suits, regardless of the heat. "You'd never see him in a sports shirt or shorts, which has practically become Israel's national uniform," a friend remarked.

When he toured the United States in 1955 on a goodwill mission for the Israeli Government, he told Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, he was amazed at the excessive amount of food he found on American dinner tables. "I almost lose my appetite from such over-abundance," he said.

He is a lover of music with a preference for early eighteenth century composers. Friends say he is a "professional amateur" at playing the piano in small chamber music groups. He is president of the Jerusalem Chamber Music Society, and serves as chairman of the Board of Governors of the Israel Institute of Technology in Haifa.

His legal career in Tel Aviv began when he entered a law firm headed by Pinhas Rosen, now Minister of Justice, and Dr. Moshe Smoira, Israel's first Chief Justice. In 1940, he left the bar for the bench and was appointed by the British Government in Palestine to be a magistrate in Haifa. When Israel became independent, he was promoted to the District Court, says the New York Times. In 1953, at the age of 41, he rose to the Supreme Court.

Justice Landau is married to the daughter of an Israeli lawyer. The couple has three daughters, 5, 11, and 14 years old.

Eichmann, former head of the Jewish section of the Nazi secret police, is on trial in Jerusalem on charges of mass extermination of Jews during the Hitler era.

The clergymen's statements were just published in the June issue of the Anti-Defamation League's "Bulletin," says the New York Times. Suggestions for punishment of Eichmann, offered by the clergymen included execution and the scattering of his ashes in the Mediterranean, life imprisonment and return to Germany for a second trial.

The six religious leaders were: the Rev. William L. Hull, Pentecostal clergyman; the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Lindsey, chairman of the Baptist Convention in Israel; the Rev. Tom Gibson, St. Andrews Memorial Presbyterian Church; Canon Hugh Jones, St. George (Anglican) Cathedral in Jerusalem; Abbot Leo Rudloff of the Roman Catholic Dormition on Mount Zion, and Archbishop George Hakim, Greek Catholic Bishop of Acre, Haifa, Nazareth, and Galilee.

In answer to the question "What do you think should be done with Eichmann if the court finds him guilty?" Mr. Hull said: "Nothing short of a death sentence could be justified in view of the law in the Western world." He suggested scattering Eichmann's ashes in the Mediterranean.

Mr. Lindsey said Eichmann must be given the kind of justice the Israel law provides, adding that it seemed likely that Eichmann would get a life sentence.

Mr. Gibson expressed hope that mercy would be shown Eichmann since this would "prevent anyone from charging the Jewish people were being vengeful." Canon Jones said: "There is no punishment severe enough."

Abbot Rudloff said that "human justice requires the death penalty," but added that the world would respond "in a very beneficial way if some other solution could be found," reports the New York Times. Archbishop Hakim suggested a life sentence and then the return of Eichmann to Germany for a second trial.

that bed lies my daddy. I don't know if this is my daddy. Because his face is not my daddy's face, and his hand is not my daddy's hand. And I didn't know then. But now I do know: it was my daddy. He fell, and he couldn't get up, so they took him there, to that house.

If I had gone with him, I wouldn't have let him fall. I would have carried his gun and wouldn't let him fall. And I wouldn't have let the bullets touch him. And if they did knock him down, I'd have picked him up at once, and then he would be whole again, just as before. Daddy.

And now I have no daddy. Now I have only a hero on the wall for a daddy. And I don't know what kind of face my daddy has: the face that was there in the bed, or the face in the picture on the wall, or in the picture in the cupboard. So many faces, and no face. No daddy.

Mummy thinks I have forgotten. Because I was a baby then, such a little one; but I remember.

And then . . . afterwards . . . afterwards . . . then one day mummy came and brought Israel, and kissed me, and said: This is Israel. Israel will love you, meidele, and we won't be alone any more. Israel will live with us.

And that was true. He loved me. He loved me so much. Until Raphy came. Now Israel loves Raphy. And mummy loves Raphy, only him. And no one loves me, no one in the whole world.

All because of Raphy. And they don't allow me even to touch him. But I will touch him, now, at once. I'll take him, and open the window, and throw him out. And that will be good. And then Raphy won't be here any more, only I'll be at home, and mummy will love me, and Israel will love me, everyone will love me. Just like before Raphy.

The floor is so cold. It hurts my feet. Now I've put on the light. Raphy's asleep. He looks so very small in his cot.

I wake him up: Raphy, get up, Raphy!

And suddenly Raphy opens his eyes. He looks at me, and opens his mouth, and smiles and laughs! Really, truly, Raphy is smiling! This is the first time Raphy has laughed. Before, he never laughed, not once, and now he's laughing. I laugh with him, and Raphy laughs and talks to me, with his eyes he's talking to me. He says: You're my big sister!

And I shout: Mummy, mum-my, come here! Look—look, look how Raphy's laughing!

Mummy comes running in, and lifts me up and hugs me tight:—Yaely, why are you without your shoes? And what's all this light? Why aren't you asleep?

And I say: Why, I just wanted to see how Raphy smiles. For the first time. Mummy, did you see him laughing? I was the first to see him, wasn't I?

Of course, says mummy, of course you were the first. You are my own big daughter. My clever daughter. But you're all cold, Yaely. Now we'll put you to bed.

Mummy, I ask, do you think Raphy loves me?

Of course, says mummy, certainly. Everybody loves you. Raphy, and I, and Israel, every one. And now, darling, close your eyes, and go to sleep.

Mummy, mummy, stay with me, don't go. . .

Israeli Christian Clergy Offer Ideas On What To Do To Eichmann

Six leading Christian clergymen in Israel unanimously approved of the manner in which the Israeli Government is conducting the trial of Adolf Eichmann, but have varying ideas on how Eichmann should be punished if he is found guilty.

The statements of these heads of major Christian institutions or denominations in Israel were reported by Rabbi Arthur Gilbert, director of the department of interreligious cooperation of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith. Rabbi Gilbert, who recently returned from Israel, conducted the interviews.
